

BOWERS SENTENCED TO CHAIR FOR MURDER OF MRS. WILMA V. CARPENTER; HEARS FATE WITHOUT EMOTION

Verdict Climaxed A Three-Day Trial Which Opened With Defendant Making Surprise Move in Pleading Guilty—Shot Woman With Her Own Pistol

(By International News Service)

NORRISTOWN, Feb. 9.—Wendell Forrest Bowers, 20-year-old roist-about and criminal inmate of reformatories and jails since he was 9, today was sentenced to death for his latest crime—the cold-blooded murder of Mrs. Wilma Valerie Carpenter, last December 13th.

Without outward sign of emotion, the pale-faced Ambler "bad boy" heard his fate pronounced by President Judge Harold G. Knight, in the century-old Montgomery County Court House, here.

The verdict climaxed a three-day trial, which opened dramatically Monday when Bowers, in a surprise move, pleaded guilty to firing two bullets into the comely widow, in her home at nearby Camp Hill.

He shot her through the heart and head with her own pistol, he admitted, when she attempted to thwart a plan to criminally assault her closest friend, little Miss Mary Griffin, 22, of Chestnut Hill, who lay trussed upon the bed.

For Bowers there can be no appeal to a higher court because of his plea; there was also no need for a jury and Judge Knight with his two associate judges, heard the evidence and fixed the penalty.

Bowers was captured early in January when G-men at Washington discovered his fingerprints among those sent to the FBI Bureau by Louisville, Ky. police. He was arrested in the Kentucky city ten days after the murder and gave an assumed name when slated for vagrancy.

President Judge Harold G. Knight and two colleagues pondered their decision for two and one-half hours last night while the youthful slayer of the pretty Camp Hill widow struggled over a game of solitaire after a dinner of sour kront and pork. Then they went home to await the opening of court.

The three jurors had not been exonerated by prosecutor to mete out a life term or death sentence to Bowers, who entered a plea of guilty the first day of his trial. District Attorney Frederick B. Smillie, a non-believer in capital punishment, continued on Page Four

Bandits Get $50,000

Miami, Fla., Feb. 9.—Three bandits today held up the Arena Bar on busy Biscayne Boulevard here and escaped with loot estimated by some sources at between $50,000 and $100,000, virtually all of which was in cash.

Probe Slaying

Branswick, Ga., Feb. 9.—Accompanied by threats to call "every man, woman and child" on St. Simons Island, if necessary, Coroner J. O. Baldwin today was to hold an inquest into the mysterious slaying of 71-year-old Dr. Charles H. Lee, rector of historic Christ Episcopal Church.

The threat came from the Coroner as Governor E. D. Rivers offered a reward of $500 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the persons responsible for the midnight sniper-slaying of Dr. Lee.

Says There Is An Agreement

London, Feb. 9.—With discussions of trans-Atlantic co-operation at a white heat, Professor Gilbert Murray, famous internationalist of Oxford University, created a sensation today with the declaration that Britain has secretly assured the United States government of support in any action America may take in the Far East.

Professor Murray indicated, however, that Britain's stand was altogether unsighted and voluntary, and that it conflicted in no way with the denials in Washington that any understanding existed between the two countries.

"I have reason to believe that we have given the American government the assurance that we are ready to support them in any action they may take regarding the Japanese invasion of China," said Murray.

Those attending: the Misses Mildred Fabian, Mary Beale, Elva Cruse, Irene Paulus, Helen Keaton; Mrs. Keith Rosser, Mrs. Edward Fleming.

WOMAN TOMATO GROWER AGAIN HAS FIRST PLACE

Mrs. Martha Woerner Has The Highest Quality for Growers In Two States

3 YEARS IN SUCCESSION

For the third consecutive year, a Bristol Township woman has received highest honors for tomatoes grown in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, for a Camden, N. J. cannery, her "competitors" being hundreds upon hundreds of growers from the two commonwealths.

To Mrs. Charles Woerner, Emilie, do these laurels go, Mrs. Woerner receiving 87 1/2 per cent for quality for her entire tonnage of tomatoes shipped to the New Jersey firm. The purchasers of the tomatoes have just informed Mrs. Woerner that her percentage of quality is highest for the states of New Jersey and Pennsylvania for 1937. This "farmerette" received the same honors in 1936 and 1935.

From the two acres of ground planted to tomatoes, Mrs. Woerner averaged 9 1/2 tons per acre.

"In addition I planted four other acres to wheat, timothy and clover," stated Mrs. Woerner. "I secured 160 bushels of wheat, or 40 bushels to the acre, and in addition got seven tons of straw. In September when the clover was cut I had over 2 1/2 tons baled, after losing one truck-load due to rain. And next season I will have three crops of timothy and clover from that acreage."

Thus from six acres of land Bucks County's foremost "farmerette" secured in one season 18 1/2 tons of tomatoes of highest quality, 160 bushels of wheat, seven tons of straw, over 2 1/2 tons of clover baled. And next year she will still reap rewards when thrice the clover and timothy crops are cut.

Bucks County farmers are taking their hats off to Mrs. Woerner.

Hold Four Youths For Trial at Court

Four of the five youths charged with robbing numerous automobiles parked along the Bristol Pike, between Cornwells Heights and Philadelphia City Line, are being held in $500 bail for court. The fifth member of the group was released in the custody of his father due to being a juvenile.

The four appeared yesterday afternoon before Justice of Peace James Laughlin in the Municipal Building. When the four appeared Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo and Pennsylvania Motor Police Officer Soule stated their investigation had not as yet been completed and they requested that the case be continued until February 14th at one p. m.

The juvenile released in the custody of his father is Harry DeLange, 15, 2927 McKinley street, Philadelphia. The others held were: Frank Reed, 18, 3035 Jasper street, Philadelphia; John Rapp, 18, 4029 Cressman street, Philadelphia; Leonard Greiger, 18, 3034 Robinson street, Philadelphia; James Lignore, 16, Eddington.

An assortment of automobile robes, flash lights, bumperettes, light bulbs, repair kits, defrosters and other automobile accessories were recovered by the officers, and are being held to await identification of the owners.

A number of motorists have reported gasoline having been stolen from their machines and it is said that the same group of youths have also admitted siphoning the gasoline out of the cars.

South Langhorne Couple Have Silver Anniversary

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Feb. 9.—Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Knox, Bellevue avenue, quietly marked their 25th wedding anniversary yesterday. In observance of a quarter century of wedded life, Mr. and Mrs. Knox participated in a sight-seeing trip to New York City over the week-end.

The couple were married in Wilmington, Del., on February 8, 1913, by the Rev. Wolff. They are the parents of two daughters and three sons; Mrs. John Devers, Miss Dorothy Knox, Warren, Norman and Albert Knox, all of whom reside in this borough.

Mr. and Mrs. Knox are recipients of numerous messages of congratulations and gifts in observance of the anniversary.

About eighty members, representing all units but Trevoze, attended a meeting of the county council of the ladies' auxiliary of Veterans of Foreign Wars, held in the home of the Doylestown Post at Doylestown.

Mary Kearney presided and routine business was transacted. For instruction in floor work for the newer auxiliaries, Mrs. Adele Frisch, past national welfare chairman, and Mrs. Permia Lodge and Mrs. Rachel Montayne, department officers, were escorted into the meeting.

Included in committee reports was one by R. Wagner, who asked for a monthly hospital report from each auxiliary, and requested each member to take at least one glass of jelly to the next council meeting, for a donation to Coatesville Veterans' Hospital. The customary monthly purchase of 3000 cigarettes for this facility was also ordered.

Fingerprints and records taken by Chief of Police Harry Welsh at Quakertown on December 12, 1936, saved a man from a pauper's grave. Last week an unknown man was found dead in a Philadelphia lodging house, and when no means of identification were found, his fingerprints were sent to Washington. There it was found they checked with the ones reported by Chief Welsh and the man was identified as Joseph Henry.

All other records listed him as having no home, so the Philadelphia authorities contacted Chief Welsh for further information. It happened that when Henry was given lodging here in December, 1936, Chief Welsh asked the wanderer whether he had friends. Henry mentioned a person in Norwalk, Connecticut, and on Monday through this record on the Quakertown police docket it was learned that Henry's home was at 21 Alken street, Norwalk. The family was notified and Henry was buried in the family plot in that New England State, instead of in an unmarked grave in Philadelphia's potters' field.

Speaking in Doylestown at the fifth annual meeting of the Bucks County Ayshire Club here, Friday afternoon, A. C. McLean, County Agent of Mercer county, Trenton, N. County Agent McLean, who spoke to about 20 members of the group, urged the local farmers to have their winter barley seed sown by September 15 or 20 at latest. The winter barley can stand cold weather provided it is gotten into the ground early enough in the fall.

LIFE OF POLICEMAN IN MORRISVILLE CHANGES

Bucks County's Oldest Officer, E. Mason, Tells of Years Gone By

SEES AN IMPROVEMENT

MORRISVILLE, Feb. 9.—Morrisville borough's first police chief, Edmund Mason, claims that a policeman's life in Morrisville, isn't what it once was.

Said to be the oldest police officer in Bucks County, Mason is now 67 years of age, and retired.

Morrisville, according to Mason, "is surely a better place in which to live than it was back there at the turn of the century."

Reminiscing at his home at Chambers and Grove streets, this week, Mason recalled when the borough had a population of 700 in 1899. That was the year he was first elected constable.

"I was the borough's lone 'John Law' in those days and I certainly had my hands full, what with robbery, assault and battery and horse stealing cases piling in one after the other. At one time of Criminal Court up at Doylestown I had 43 cases to be tried."

In the early days, the Pennsylvania Railroad yards were located here and Mason said many of the offenders would come in on freight cars and perpetrate a variety of crimes.

Mason takes delight in telling of the time he was nearly shot while trying

Thomas Adams, Langhorne, Is Injured In A Crash

LANGHORNE, Feb. 9.—In a collision of two automobiles at Trevoze yesterday, Thomas Adams, 21, of this borough, was injured, and the drivers of both cars escaped injury. Adams was taken to Abington Hospital for treatment.

The crash occurred at Trevoze and Bristol roads, Trevoze. Driver of the machine in which Adams was riding was Edward Dolan, Trevoze; and the driver of the second car was Edward Kendrath, 1711 E. Hunting Park avenue, Philadelphia.

exonerated by a jury composed of Russell B. Gulick, foreman; W. Lester Trauch, Frank Stover, Frank X. Shelley, Charles E. Poole and Alonzo Bishop.

The defendant was charged with involuntary manslaughter following the death of Miles J. Deveny, 64, Pipersville, who was struck by the defendant's car on the Lackawanna Trail, north of Toltickon Park, November 24, 1937. He died enroute to the Doylestown Emergency Hospital from a fracture of the skull and legs.

Of the 84 cases of communicable diseases in Quakertown during the past year, sixty-four of them were whooping cough. This was revealed when the Quakertown Board of Health presented its annual report to Quakertown Borough Council.

The report shows also that there were only five cases of measles and four of typhoid fever. Other communicable diseases and the number of each were reported as follows: scarlet fever, 2; mumps, 2; tuberculosis, 2; para-typhoid, 2; diphtheria, 1; erysipelas, 1, and encephalitis thalgie, 1.

Included in the report also was the statement that 73 deaths and 74 births had taken place in the borough during the past year.

Officers of the board are as follows: President, D. Lamar Roberts; vice-president, Dr. W. F. Wetzel; secretary, Frank H. Hartman, and health officer, Harry Rhoades. Other members of the board are Dr. William G. Moyer and Clement D. Zwiler.

SAILOR SAYS HE GOT FITTINGS AT LANGHORNE

Story Said To Be False and He Is Turned Over To Navy Yard Authorities

VALUE GIVEN AS $1600.00

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 9.—A sailor has been handed over to the Philadelphia Navy Yard authorities for the alleged stealing of valuable navy yard fittings. The youth when first arrested here on Saturday told the police he had purchased the material from a "Langhorne contractor."

The police communicated with Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo and Penna. Motor Police at Oxford Valley Barracks. The suspect was taken to Langhorne, where Russo and Penna. Motor Police joined in questioning him. He was brought back here.

Edward Earl Wilfong, 24, a sailor on the U. S. S. Allegheny, was turned over to Navy authorities and is now in the custody of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Wilfong was arrested here last Saturday by Detective Sergeant Anthony Raywood and Detective John Donahoe, of Trenton police, and Sergeant Simpson, of Hamilton Township police, while, police charge, he was on his way to dispose of $1,600 worth of brass valves and two powerful Navy search-lights.

The three officers were cruising in checking up on junk yards when they detected a sedan car which was heavily loaded. They stopped the machine and say they found the Government loot covered up with bags and old coats. Wilfong, who was wearing civilian clothing, was taken to the detective bureau for questioning.

Police said the sailor claimed that he purchased the material from a "Langhorne contractor." Raywood and Donahoe took him to that place to check up. They then brought him back to this city and communicated with Navy Yard officials.

Government officials came here yesterday and took charge of the prisoner. They reported that an attempt was made to stop Wilfong's car as it was

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1938, by The Baltimore Sun)

C. I. O. and The Communists

IT WAS only a short time ago that any suggestion that the C. I. O. was saturated with Communism and being used by clever Communists to foster their revolutionary plans was met with vehement denunciation from the professional liberals as "Red Baiting."

AND IF IT were asserted that the Communist leaders supported the New Deal because they believe its policies tend to break down the American system more quickly than it can be done by any other means, the charge was made that this was "Liberty League stuff," put out by the greedy rich who wanted to evade taxes. Yet the truth of both these things has been obvious for a long time. No one

W. C. T. U. Honors Memory Of Miss Frances Willard

A novel feature of the Willard Memorial meeting of Bristol W. C. T. U., in the First Baptist Sunday School room, last evening, was the participation in the program by the young people's branches.

The Loyal Temperance Legion, in charge of Miss Jane Rodgers, conducted the opening session, and afterward entertained with saxophone and harmonica solos, and vocal duets. Members of the Safety Patrol were introduced and recited their pledge; and members of the Humane Society were also presented. A song followed by the group, and the Y. T. C. also gave a song.

The Frances Willard memorial service include readings by Mrs. William DuHamel, Mrs. Ada B. Sands, Miss Anna Heritage, Miss Jane Rodgers and Mrs. Harry H. Headley. Incorporated in these articles were items telling of countless activities of Miss Willard, the "uncrowned queen of America," who was born in Churchville, N. Y., September 28, 1839, and died February 17, 1898. She was spoken of as a "resourceful educator, a matchless orator, an ardent patriot, and a servant of God." Miss Willard was the first woman president of a college granting degrees; was first president of the National Council of Women; and for one year was editor of the Chicago Daily Post. She received a master's degree from the University of Syracuse, and an L.L.D. from Ohio Wesleyan University. Miss Willard backed movements for physical education in the schools, the eight-hour day, and the Mothers' Meetings which developed in the Parent-Teacher Associations. She was a great worker for woman suffrage also.

Mrs. Ada B. Sands read an article describing how the white ribbon was adopted as the W. C. T. U. badge, standing for purity, "and embracing all the prismatic colors which illustrate the diversified lines of work of the W. C. T. U." Miss Martha C. Hughes gave an account of hearing Miss Willard at the national convention in Philadelphia, in 1885, where Miss Willard was the presiding officer. Miss Hughes also recounted Miss Willard's visit to Bristol in 1890, when she and her secretary, Miss Anna Gordon, who was later to become national and world president of the union, were entertained over a week-end by Mrs. Samuel Swain at 507 Radcliffe street. Miss Willard addressed a large audience in the First Baptist Church during her visit here.

During the business session Miss Anna Heritage, chairman of the motion picture department for the county organization, made a plea for individuals to send letters to their Congressmen, urging support of the Pettigill bill to regulate block booking and blind selling of films.

A food sale followed, this benefiting the centenary fund. Refreshments were served by the social committee of which Miss Laura McCoy is chairman.

TWO MEN ENTER DAMAGE SUITS AS RESULT OF CRASH

Bring Actions for $4,958.07 As Result of Truck Crash At Tullytown

TWO MEN KILLED

Accident Occurred Early In The Morning of September 24th, 1936

Damage suits aggregating $4,958.07 have been filed in the Court of Common Pleas at Doylestown as the result of an accident in which two men were killed and which occurred near Tullytown, September 24, 1936.

Harvey E. Allcutt and Norman C. Burrell, both of Chester, have filed an action in trespass against Shein's Express, Inc., of New Jersey.

In the statement of claim, Burrell claims $2500, and Allcutt claims $2098.07. The plaintiffs allege that September 24, 1936, Burrell was driving a tractor-drawing-trailer on the Bristol Pike and that it crashed into a parked tractor and trailer which was operated by Frank Mikolayczyk and owned by the defendant.

Burrell alleges that he suffered a concussion of the spine and injuries to his pelvis because of the collision.

The accident occurred at about 5.30 a. m., east of the curve in the Bristol Pike, Route 13, just at the entrance to Tullytown Borough. A truck of the Shon Trucking Company parked on the southside was struck by a truck of the Allcutt Trucking Company, Chester. The Shon truck was overturned and the driver, Frank Mitchell, was fatally crushed about the head and died instantly.

John Harris, helper on the Allcutt truck, was thrown out of the cab of the vehicle on which he was riding, and fell beneath the wheels. He was decapitated.

The Allcutt truck was operated by Burrell, 25, 916 Madison street, Chester.

Mary L. Oswald, 75 Second street, Condale, has been named the defendant in a $10,000 damage suit filed by John P. Razulis, of Philadelphia. According to the statement of claim in the Prothonotary's office, Doylestown, the plaintiff was operating his car on the Ridge Road, near Keller's Church, February 21, 1937, when it figured in a collision with a car driven by A. J. Oswald, but owned by the defendant.

The plaintiff alleges that he was a patient in the Quakertown Community Hospital for five days and that he suffered injuries which will impair his eyesight. For the loss of wages, as a cutter, for three weeks, he claims the sum of $135. Medical bills amounted to $81.30.

Lieutenant-Commander Mackey To Speak Here

Lieutenant Commander D. M. Mackey, Operations Officer at the United States Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J., will address the Men's Brotherhood of the Bristol Presbyterian Church, this evening, at 8.15 o'clock.

The subject "Lighter-than-air Craft" is one which should be of interest to many, judging from the number of Bristolians connected with the aircraft industry.

The Brotherhood extends a cordial invitation to its members and friends to attend this meeting, which is open to the public.

Ladies are to be guests of the evening. Games will follow the meeting and refreshments will be served.

Dedication Performance Of Theatre Eagerly Awaited

Patrons at the dedication performance of the new, modern "Bristol" Theatre, which will occur this evening at 7.30 o'clock, will find a gala show awaiting their enjoyment.

This will be a banner evening for theatre-goers locally, for in addition to the splendid program of motion pictures to be presented on Bucks County's newest and largest screen, there will be an introductory program. In this Howard I. James, Esq., will make a brief address; and the American Legion Cadets of Robert W. Bracken Post, will present numbers. When the doors open at 6.30 o'clock a large crowd is expected to be present.

The program in its entirety includes: Singing of the national anthem; selections by Cadet Corps; address, Mr. James; Paramount news; "Ain't Nature Old-Fashioned"; "Where East Meets West"; Hollywood "music man" in a pictorial review; "Peeping Penguins" in technicolor; "Queens of Harmony," Phil Spitalny and his girl band; the rousing romance of the U. S. Naval Academy "Hold 'Em Navy."

The management of this new theatre, which has installed the finest of equipment for enjoyment of its patrons, announces splendid bills of coming attractions also.

SURPLUS OF SCHOLARS

Pleading for a large addition to the scholarship endowments of Harvard University, President James B. Conant, in his annual report to the Board of Overseers, put forward a new argument for a real democracy in education. The learned professions, he said should be recruited from "all economic levels of society," not from the relatively small number of those who can afford to send their sons to college.

Some past efforts to democratize higher education in America have aimed mainly at enlarging university and college enrollments. In one excited period of prosperity there was talk of providing post-high school education for almost everybody. Thousands of students crowded into the universities, with not much concern whether the raw material could be converted into real scholarship.

But Dr. Conant believes that there is more danger of an oversupply of learned and professional men than of a shortage. Walter Pitkin's book on "The Twilight of the American Mind," of which its author subsequently repented in part, came to the conclusion that too much learning is a dangerous thing and that the universities were turning out more professional men than the world can use.

This does not quite fit with the occasional complaints of shortage of doctors, chemical engineers and other professional types. There would be a shortage in many professions, perhaps, if only first-class men were practicing in them. Dr. Conant would prefer that fewer men were well trained and that candidates for higher education were more carefully selected.

He would provide better opportunities for better students, even to the degree of restricting the number of those who enter college mainly because their parents can pay their way.

RED CROSS AID FOR CHINA

Just what intercession Japan may make of President Roosevelt's request that through the Red Cross America join in giving aid to China may be a matter for diplomatic consideration. But Japan's attitude need not deter humanitarian action by the people of this country.

The people of China are suffering—suffering from want of medical supplies, suffering from want of clothing. America as a nation which has taken like aid to other countries where war has brought misery may properly feel that it violates no requirements of neutrality in supplying the necessities of life to a civilian population.

Unfortunately, China is always in want. Its normal needs are now increased by many degrees. The President has suggested to former Admiral Grayson, president of the American Red Cross, that that organization take over the task of raising a million dollars with which supplies of food, of medical stores and of clothing shall be purchased for the non-combatant sufferers in China. Admiral Grayson has passed along the appeal to Red Cross branches in all parts of the country.

Martin, head of the union, denounced Communism and asserted that "the issue of Communists and Communism in the trade unions must be fought out to a finish"—when he made that assertion, a prompt statement came from Mr. C. A. Hathaway, member of the Communist party's central committee.

VERY vigorously Mr. Hathaway declared that the Communists had now "taken the lead" in Mr. Martin's organization and that Mr. Martin could not out Communists from their positions of influence because he will not be upheld by the rank and file of automobile workers. This seems equitable to a declaration of control and certainly is a defiance. It followed upon a denunciation of Communism by the United Mine Workers, who, undoubtedly directed by Mr. Lewis, reaffirmed their constitutional provision excluding Communists from membership. And it followed, too, the A. F. of L. anti-Communist declaration at Miami, certain charges by Mr. Green concerning Communism in the C. I. O. and anti-Communist comments from Mr. Dubinski, of the powerful garment workers union.

IT ALL ADDS up to the fact that the more conspicuous labor leaders seem suddenly to have awakened to the menace of Communism in their unions and are now as vehement in asserting its existence as they formerly were in denying it. They point out that the Communist support of the New Deal is sinister support and that the Communists are out to capture the big unions for their own un-American purposes. In other words, this isn't just a common "Communist scare." This isn't Mr. Hearst talking through his hat. This is no Red hunt. These are alarmed labor leaders, closely tied up to the White House, who have overreached themselves and now face an ugly situation.

IF MR. MARTIN means what he says, and is going to make a fight to the finish to oust the Communists, he ought to have the good wishes—in that fight, anyhow—of every patriotic American. And it isn't exactly helpful to have some of Mr. Lewis' close friends publicly referring to him as a "stuffed shirt" and a "phony." Maybe he is, but if this is—as he says—a fight to break the hold of Communism on the U. A. W. A., the time to call him names is after the fight has been won—that is if the name callers want it won. Trade unions have come to stay in this country and everybody recognizes the fact. No fair-minded man wants to see them hurt. However, it would be pretty sad all-around if they should be captured by the Communists. That there is some danger of exactly that is the only possible deduction from the Martin-Hathaway controversy, the United Mine Workers' action and the general excitement on the subject in labor circles.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD—Now that he has read the preview notices on his "Follies," Samuel Goldwyn is not for Phil Baker and has signed him up to a long term contract. Which gives you an idea of what a screwy place Hollywood is.

For Baker practically didn't get into the picture. His role, an actor whose part repeatedly is rewritten out of a film, almost duplicates his real experience with Goldwyn.

As originally intended, Baker was to play his accordion in the "Follies." But there was so much talent on hand that he finally ended up as a running gag. Every so often he appears only to be told by the producer (the one in the film) that his part has been changed or cut out.

There's a shot of him dancing up and down and screaming: "Why did I want to get into pictures?"

This wasn't acting, it was Baker talking right from the heart.

The jeweler, Flate, has engaged Constance Collier as a Hollywood representative, which makes her a film colony champion in the matter of sidelines. Whenever a producer has a real screen bet but wants to improve her diction, he calls in Constance Collier to do a coaching job. Annabella, the French star, is one of her pupils.

With these activities, Miss Collier mixes frequent appearances on the screen. A wise woman of the theater, she still has the unbounded energy of a young girl. Also, when she wishes, one of the sharpest tongues in Hollywood. The phoney squirm when she is around.

Funny story I just heard about Chester Morris. Chester has appeared on many of the big air shows—Lux, Crosby's, the Silver theater, Feg Murray's—but he never has been able to win much praise from his 13-year-old son, Brooks. Youngster finally confessed his idea of a program was the police thriller, "Calling All Cars".

Morris, like any other guy, likes to be a big shot in the eyes of his kid. So he had his agent get in touch with the management of the program and ask if they'd like to have Morris as a guest star.

Certainly, they said, but they couldn't afford him.

Money, explained the agent, was no object. So Morris whose radio salary is in the neighborhood of two grand, did a "Calling All Cars" broadcast for nothing. The record of the program is now his kid's proudest possession.

Some of us were lamenting the other 3 a. m. that there's not a single girl show to be found on Hollywood's famous night club strip. The Trocadero, with the De Marcos, has the only big time names. Several of the spots, however, excel in intimate entertainment. Smoothest of the table-top artists are the Roberts brothers at Ray Haller's. They never sing a smutty song because this type of performer dies the death in Hollywood where everybody knows the answers in advance. At this spot, Bill Hoffman also beguiles lively tunes from the electric organ. Above the bar is the "fish bowl" where the mermaid appears at intervals. Between appearances, the mermaid sits around the cafe, dressed in black, even to hat with veil, and is the most dignified person in the place.

Few of the Hollywood spots dare to have initiated cutlery or distinctive astrays, glasses or napkins, because the customers carry them away as souvenirs. At Clara Bow's "It" cafe, they even stole trailing vines that hung down behind the booths. If the customer is polite enough to ask for a souvenir, the Lamaze gives him a wine card—a kind of the cafe recently discontinued but with the name on it.

At Paramount, Marlene Dietrich pays a visit to the "You and Me" set to watch Sylvia Sidney and George Raft act, and to chat with her good friend, Director Fritz Lang.

Often aloof, today she is gay. "Remember when I worked as an extra for you?" she asks Lang. He doesn't and Dietrich reminds him it was in the German picture, "The Nibelungen".

As she talks of those days on an extra, the extras on the set listen with interest. What happened to Dietrich may happen to them. Suddenly, Hollywood is a more exciting place.

In the News. . . El Brendel, who has only a flash in "Happy Landings", will get a good part in Shirley Temple's "Little Miss Broadway". . . During her attack of hiccoughs, Midge Evans received more than 1,000 suggested remedies from fans.

"EXTRA FARE" by Edna Robb Webster

CHAPTER I

THE transcontinental limited, extra-fare train, the Big Chief, stretched its jointed length along the terminal tracks like a lethargic monster slowly stirring from sleep. The one huge gleaming eye in the front of its head blinked and peered into the distance, lesser eyes opened and closed speculatively; the monster growled and snorted and hissed with startling suddenness at intervals; it stirred and waited and dozed again, always in an attitude of alert readiness to leap away.

Men—looking small and powerless by comparison—scurried around it, swarmed over it and peered into its vitals, probed and adjusted and shouted to each other. Bulls clanged, whistles screeched, locomotives panted and sighed, voices shrilled and echoed and reverberated through the vast expanse of the terminal sheds. Far down the platform near the gates the ostentatious round red sign on the observation platform of the Big Chief guided anxious passengers to their sections and a double relief. For they entered and found the little compartments which would serve them for living quarters for the next three days—and they had not missed their train. People swarmed through the gates and around the waiting monster like pygmies examining a Cyclops. Singly—in twos and threes—in groups. Laughing, talking, shouting, waiting leisurely or moving in haste. Kisses and embraces—tears. Greetings and farewells.

On the observation platform a girl stood beside the railing with her hand raised in a gesture of farewell, smiling into a camera lens focused upon her. Its operator nodded and grinned broadly at the girl, raised his left hand which held a photo-flash reflector, grasped the camera bulb in his right hand. A white lurid light flared for a fraction of an instant in which the glaring illumination of the concourse was dimmed to a garish yellow. The infinitesimal click of the camera shutter was lost in the pandemonium of sounds surrounding it, but the action had recorded the first incident of importance in Jaxie Cameron's exciting adventure in the interest of the Star-Tribune.

The girl laughed gayly and leaned over the brass railing to call to the photographer. He grasped the camera, folded the tripod, tucked it under his arm and hurried over to peer up eagerly into her face.

"I hope you got a good shot for the morning edition, Tommy." She smiled down at him. "You know, I just can't believe yet that I'm going 'way out to the coast for the column, can you?"

"Nothing else is so real to me right now, Jaxie." His face sobered instantly. "Geel but I hate to have you go!"

"Why, Tom!" Her soft brown eyes reproved him, gently.

"Well, of course, you know what I mean. Sure, I want you to go and have a swell trip and all that—but, Jaxie, be sure you come back to the Star-Tribune office the same as you left—my best girl!" His voice pleaded.

"Why, of course, you old half portion! What do you think, some handsome cowboy in chaps and—"

"More likely," he interrupted merrily, "that some of those movie scouts will snap you up as the greatest find of the flickers."

"Idiot!" she rebuked him fondly and patted the hand that rested on the rail. "Run along now and get the rest of your shots for the roto, so you'll still be in the office when I do return. 'Bye, Tommy, and be good!"

"Bye, Jaxie darlin', and ditto."

Other passengers had come out of the car onto the platform, also conversing with those who were waiting to speed their departure. Several had watched the incident from inside the car. A man stood in the open doorway. He pushed the screen forward and came out as Jaxie faced him. Their glances met and caught briefly as he held the door for her. When she had passed him and entered he turned and watched her progress through the club car to the corridor. Passengers who had settled themselves and their baggage earlier already filled the armchairs and divans of the car. Their eyes followed Jaxie, involuntarily, as she walked between them. She sir! He would treat her right, he would, and his thoughts leaped ahead to conjecture upon the resulting tip.

One by one Mose appraised his passengers—their baggage, their clothes, their manners. Mose was an enterprising porter. But human nature was the darndest queer thing! You never could be sure. A porter's life was a constant guessing game, and nine times out of ten you guessed wrong. As a gamble, it had all the horses and dice in the world beaten.

"Ah thinks ahm gonna be right 'bout dat gal, though," he reassured himself. "Now dis heah bird, numbah one, he am gonna be left party was a magnet for eyes, in nei smart tweed suit with a soft beaver collar that embraced her shoulders gently and formed a hollow for the smart off-the-face hat that framed her lovely face as if proud to display its charming features.

In the corridor of the next car she stepped aside to permit another girl to pass—a girl who was very blonde, very pretty and very nonchalant. Her wide blue eyes appraised Jaxie for a moment with an air of condescending hauteur, then she swaggered on into the club car.

"Not bad looking," Jaxie reflected, accustomed to cataloguing people at a glance or a brief meeting and converting them into grist for the mill of her daily column. "But her clothes are imitations of expensive models, and she isn't as genuine as she thinks she looks. She overdoes her bored-by-travel air, and betrays the fact that she never was on a train before in her life."

Jaxie's progress was again retarded by the porter at the entrance to her car. Staggering in and dropping several bulky pieces of baggage in the aisle, he began to stow them away into the first section with vicious and glowering thrusts. Duggage bags, they were, and two battered khaki cases that looked as if they had done service in a couple of wars. A rattling of implements suggested miner's tools. He surely could not be a wandering laborer on an extra-fare train. The porter gave the last parcel a final belligerent kick under the seat with his foot and stood aside to allow Jaxie to pass. Her smile was sympathetic and he grinned response.

This lady, now. She must be somebody, she must, his thoughts ran swiftly as he worked. Comin' to the train early and havin' her picture taken on the platform. Yes, she would, and his thoughts leaped ahead to conjecture upon the resulting tip.

I am an Advertising Man

For over thirty years I have been writing advertisements for national advertisers—shoes, soap, cereals, automobiles, radios, tobacco, blankets, tooth-powder.

To me it is the most fascinating work in the world—learning about the merits of merchandise and then telling people about them—bringing greater comfort, and enjoyment, into people's lives—introducing people to new pleasures, helping them to get the most for their money.

Besides being fascinating, it is satisfying. My intimate experience with advertisers has shown me that, except for rare exceptions, the manufacturers and merchants of this nation lean over backwards to be sincere and honest.

The law of advertising is simple once one understands its working—the more people know about the merit of a product, the more people buy it. The greater the volume of sales, the less the cost to manufacture. Savings in making mean either lower prices to the consumer or greater value put back into the merchandise.

As an advertising man I can sincerely affirm that it pays to read the advertisements in the newspapers—for news of new things, for news of bargains and savings.

There are thousands of other men—and women—devoting their lives to advertising writing, who will tell you the same thing. They know!

ON SCREENS IN BRISTOL

BRISTOL

Benny Baker is Hollywood's most persistent actor. When he starts after anything he hangs on with the tenacity of a bulldog until he gets it, and is convinced that he owes whatever success he has achieved to this quality.

Baker, currently featured in "Hold 'Em Navy," which opens tonight at the Bristol Theatre, was a truck driver in Rochester, N. Y., when he decided to become an actor. His friends laughed at his ambition for the stage but they didn't succeed in kidding him out of the notion.

He haunted stage doors and the offices of managers but without success. Determined to get into the theatre he took a job selling candy in a burlesque theatre before the show started and between the acts.

One day an actor was taken ill and Baker climbed over the footlights to take his place. It was a small part, just a bit that required him to run across the stage with two suit cases. But he put something into it that made the audience laugh—something the other comedians had failed to do.

He became a regular with the company and soon had a better part and in addition he became stage manager. After two years of burlesque on the road he went to New York determined to team up with Lou Holtz. He chased Holtz for more than five months before he got the job which he held for five years.

Afterwards he became a stooge for Jack Benny and finally went back to Holtz on a series of radio broadcasts.

Baker went to Hollywood under contract to Hal Roach's studios. He played in a number of shorts and at last got a part in Mae West's "Going to Town."

When the picture was previewed, Baker invited a dozen friends to attend, but discovered to his embarrassment that his part had been entirely cut out of the film.

This didn't discourage the young comedian. He refused to allow it to wreck his career and carried on.

Today he is one of Paramount's contract comedians and is currently portraying one of the important roles in "Hold 'Em Navy," in which he is featured with Lew Ayres, Mary Carlisle and John Howard.

Baker's recent pictures include "Champagne Waltz," "Rose Bowl," "College Holiday," "Hotel Haywire," "Wild Money," "Blonde Trouble" and "Double or Nothing."

NOTICE

In the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks County

To JOHN DeNORMANDIE and any holders of the below mentioned mortgage:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that on February 7, 1938, Teofil Ostrowski and Antonina Ostrowski, his wife, petitioned said Court, setting forth that they owned a certain tract in Bristol Township, Bucks County, described in said petition, title to which they acquired from the Ideal Land Company, by deed dated November 20, 1920, recorded in the Bucks County Recorder's Office, in Deed Book No. 442, page 614; that a larger tract in Bristol Township, containing about 249½ acres and including their tract, as fully described in said petition, was encumbered by a mortgage for 300 pounds due November 1, 1972, given May 1, 1972, by John Pursell et ux to John DeNormandie, and that there is no satisfaction thereof of record, and that a period of twenty-one years had elapsed since all the principal of said mortgage became due, but no payment of principal or interest had been made within said period.

WHEREFORE, you are hereby notified to appear in said Court, on Monday, March 14, at ten o'clock A. M., to show cause why a decree should not be entered discharging the mortgaged premises from said lien and directing that satisfaction thereof be entered upon the record of said mortgage, and that all actions brought or to be brought thereon be barred.

HIGH SCHOOL QUINTET TROUNCES BENSALEM

(By "Herm" Corn)

Capturing their seventh straight league victory, the Bristol High quintet tightened their grasp on the coveted crown when they handed a weak but fighting Bensalem five a decisive 29 to 16 setback.

This is the second defeat the Owls were presented by the bearers of Red and Gray during the local campaign. In the first fray the going was rough, for both aggregations with the referee calling a mere sum of 40 fouls against both clubs. However, with the disadvantages which arose, the proteges of Steve Juenger managed to squeeze through with a 32-22 win.

In the wind-up last night, the Bunnies started off with a fast display of brilliant floorwork when Bill Gallagher snapping the ball from the tap-off, quickly heaved a hook pass to Captain Pete De Luca who laid it away for the inaugural of the scoring. With this early lead in the opening minutes, Bristol completely outplayed and outclassed their opponents to the tune of a 10 to 1 score which they enjoyed at the halfway intermission.

The second half proved to be much faster and better for both teams. The local basketweavers, in the third period, gained 12 points to the Owls' 4, making the score read 22 to 5. In the final chapter the margin of points which the home team possessed must have proved an incentive for the visitors. They scored again and again, tallying a total of 11 points to 7 for Bristol. Total score: Bristol, 29; Bensalem, 16.

It was Gallagher who, scoring three time with field goals and two charity tosses combined with Van Lenten who had two double-deckers and an equal number of gift tosses, really helped in the Blue and Grey downfall. Nor can too much credit be given to Little Gus Carnvale, Red and Grey right guard. Gus was always in where the going was toughest and could be counted on to take the ball off the back-board and keep it away from the point-starved Owls. He also found time to drop the ball through the net for five points, and with the rest of the team played a bang-up defensive game.

Captain Pete De Luca and Dan Di Midio followed close behind his track by looping two twin-pointers apiece for four points each.

For the visitors, Joe Malone, with eight points, led the attack followed by Will Baker, who tallied six points.

DANNO O'MAHONY TO WRESTLE ROB RUSSELL

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 9 — Danno O'Mahony, former world's champion, and the first Irishman to wear that crown, will make another stop in his campaign to regain the title, when he faces Rebel Rob Russell, berserk Southerner, in the feature bout at the Trenton Arena tonight.

O'Mahony gained undisputed possession of the crown, when he defeated Jimmy Londoos, Jim Browning and Ed Don George. In his first American campaign he disposed of every challenger of note, including Dick Shikat, who later removed the ban from him. With the care and strain of title-defending and one night stands removed from his mind Danno is a better wrestler now than he was before.

He faces one of the toughest and roughest grapplers in the game in Russell. The Rebel, ace villain of the local canvas, has won his last two matches, stopping the five-bout winning streak of Geza Tako and pinning Jack Donovan. O'Mahony hopes to redeem the prestige of the Irish by downing Russell and avenging Donovan.

Two mat giants, Mike Mazurki, six feet four inches, and weighing 245 pounds, meets Wee Willie Davis, who tips the scale at 270 pounds and stands six feet seven inches tall. This will be the semi-windup. The O'Mahony-Russell setto is scheduled for the two fall out of three, 90 minute time limit bout.

Len Macalnos, former All-American football star, tangles with huge Floyd Marshall, and a new unknown grappler, tagging himself as the Black Secret, will make his initial bow against classy Bobby Roberts.

The first bout will start at 8:30 p. m.

The Problem of Gomez

By BURNLEY

Even at this early date Boss Joe McCarthy of the Yanks has a Gomez problem to worry about.

We are not referring to the Goofy One's salary demands. No, it's much more serious than that. The name of Gomez has been appearing in the public prints quite often this winter, but not in the sports pages. It seems that the eccentric southpaw's marital woes have driven him at last along the well-worn path to Reno. The Mrs. has been bitterly contesting all of Lefty's legal moves for a divorce, and the alimony angles and other fireworks are yet to come.

Now all this wouldn't be so bad from the Yankees' standpoint if it weren't for the fact that the skinny southpaw is highly impressionable and erratic. Last year he was the best pitcher in baseball, but during the two seasons before that he was in a terrific slump. Like the little kid with the curl, when Lefty is bad, he's terrible; and his mental attitude has much to do with his mound effectiveness.

How will Gomez's marital muddle affect his pitching in 1938? If he goes into another nose-dive, the Yanks will be hard pressed to fight off the other clubs.

Last season was the Goofy One's best, all things considered. He topped the American League hurlers in four departments—strikeouts, shutouts, earned run effectiveness and total victories.

Very interesting, Watson, but you can't deduce from that whether Lefty due for a good or bad season in 1938.

tal punishment, declared imprisoning Bowers would be like placing a poison tablet in a bottle.

Defense Attorney Elmer Menges in his closing summation challenged the Court to exact its "pound of flesh" from the youth who shot and killed Mrs. Carpenter and tried to attack her candidate and friend, Miss Mary Griffin, in the Carpenter home last December 13th.

Menges described the defendant, an ex-reformatory inmate, as a misfit "permitted by the misdirected machinery of society" to roam the streets at will and to engage in a career of crime.

Meanwhile, as the hands of the prison clock moved inexorably toward the to arrest an Indian. In the ensuing scuffle, a cartridge in his revolver exploded, but fortunately, he explains, "it roared into the ground."

Mason said he arrested all types of criminals in his 20 years as a police officer, including several murderers, horse thieves, holdup men and highway robbers.

"And," the retired Mr. Mason proudly proclaims, "I've been beaten up plenty of times—but I've never lost my man."

Mr. Mason served as constable until 1919, when he resigned to take up the work of installing water mains in the borough. He had charge of that work until 1932. He was appointed chief of police for Morrisville in 1904—without pay. He was paid by the hour and only when on special duty. He was also the first uniformed officer in Morrisville and his outfit, which cost about $120, was purchased by popular subscription. After the purchase of this uniform, Mason did traffic duty on the main corner Saturday and Sunday nights.

Mr. Mason, who is one of the oldest Democrats in Morrisville, was born and lived here all his life. He was at one time the Democratic candidate for sheriff of Bucks County. He also ran for the State Assembly and for county commissioner. In the latter campaign he lost by only 32 votes.

Mr. Mason, when a boy, was quite an athlete and played baseball with the Rowleys, of Trenton, the Morrisville team, and the Blinns.

Trenton police claim that the sailor admitted stealing four other loads of valves and fittings valued at several thousand dollars from the Navy Yard and disposing of them in this city. Government officials said the prisoner would be charged with grand larceny, failing to wear his uniform and not reporting for duty.
